Nutter appoints panel to study L&I procedures

Review. The study comes almost five months after the deadly June 5 collapse.

Mayor Michael Nutter announced Thursday the creation of a special, independent commission to review and evaluate the Department of Licenses & Inspections.

The commission, which will be headed by City University of New York associate professor Glenn P. Corbett and former U. S. Attorney Peter F. Vaira, will study the department's past and current operations, as well as organizational and fine structures, among others.

The announcement comes almost five months after the deadly June 5 building collapse at 22nd and Market streets in Center City that killed six and injured 14.

"It's an independent agency to look at the department from top to bottom," Nutter said.

The 15-member commission is instructed to submit a report of suggestions and recommendations for changes and improvements to Nutter no later than July 1, 2014.

Quoted

"We want to minimize, if not eliminate, to the best of our abilities, the chance that any tragedy of this kind or another kind could occur in the future." Nutter

Vaira, who currently serves as a private attorney, said most of the commission's investigating will be done privately and not through the legislature.

"We're after facts, we're after information; we want to find out want went wrong," he said.

City Treasurer Nancy Winkler and her husband Jay Bryan, who lost their daughter Anne Bryan in the June collapse, originally suggested the creation of a blue ribbon panel to investigate L&I in September.

The committee will evaluate:

- L&I's past and current operations
- Organizational structure
- Staffing and requirements
- Budget
- Use of technology
- City's fine structure

Super mayor. Michael Nutter calls 911 for injured bicyclist

Mayor Michael Nutter definitely has a compassionate side.

As he was driving along Martin Luther King Drive on his way to the office Thursday, one of his assistants, who was about five minutes ahead of him, called him to the scene of a gruesome crash: A bicyclist lay on the ground in his helmet and suit with one shoe off and in excruciating pain.

"A cyclist coming across the street was hit by a motorist," Nutter told reporters Thursday.

The cyclist was hit by a car, went airborne, hit the hood of another car and came down hard on the street, he said. "And he was pretty banged up. It was a pretty bad scene."

When Nutter got to the scene, the man was in the middle of the street and he was bleeding from the face and in a lot of pain, Nutter said. The motorist had pulled off to the side of the road.

Nutter called 911.

"They said they had received other calls. I just said the citizen's in really bad shape and could you get here." Nutter said.

Nutter's security detail joined police to stop traffic on the heavily traveled road. "And just stayed with him, kept talking to him, he was fully conscious," Nutter said.

"We just told him to sit tight," he added, saying the man broke several bones. TOMMY ROWAN

Mayor heading abroad to Israel, UK for two weeks

Trade work. A travel exposition and new research agreement will bring him overseas starting Friday.

Mayor Michael Nutter is heading to the United Kingdom and Israel Friday for two weeks to lead a trade mission.

He'll join Jack Ferguson, CEO of the Philadelphia Convention and Visitors Bureau, in attending the travel expo World Travel Market in London. The mayor will spend the majority of his time in England, visiting with companies that have already expressed an interest in opening offices in Philadelphia.

Some of those companies, such as Aberdeen Asset Management, energy efficiency expert Mark Group and GlaxoSmithKline, already have offices here.

"They are either interested in growing or someone new [may be] looking to establish an office in North America, said Alan Greenberger, deputy mayor of Philadelphia.

"Health care, life sciences, technology, energy and energy efficiency companies are especially interested because of Philadelphia's expertise in these areas."

The highlight of the Israel segment of the trip, from Nov. 7-11, will be the signing of a new research agreement with Hebrew University by Drexel University's President John Fry and Children's Hospital CEO Steven Altschuler. Hebrew University researchers and alumni have been awarded nine Nobel Prizes.

Nutter will attend the Jewish Federations of North America General Assembly, allowing him to meet Jewish leaders from around the country. He will also attend meetings with leading Israel venture capitalists.

The job market

Why Israel?

While U.S. companies are exporting jobs, Israeli companies are bringing marketing and technology jobs here.

A 2012 Temple University report recommended that Mayor Nutter conduct a trade mission to Israel. The report found there were 59 Israeli companies in the region, including pharmaceutical giant Teva, which created 2,200 jobs.

The total economic impact to the region was $1.6 billion in 2011.

Footing the bill

Select Greater Philadelphia is picking up the tab for the trip. Despite no taxpayer funds being used, some have criticized the mayor for leaving during the school crisis.

- "In an increasingly competitive global economic environment, we cannot sit idly by and expect businesses to come to us and win people's trust and interest," Greenberger said.

In the last four years, Metro readers have donated well over $100,000 worth of toys to hundreds of local children. / METRO FILE PHOTO

Tony's Metro Magic brings holiday cheer to kids in need

Annual collection. Metro is calling on readers to make the season brighter.

Loyal Metro readers will be familiar with our annual toy drive for underprivileged children, Metro Magic, which is helmed by our staff in New York, Philadelphia and Boston. But what you might not know is that the man who oversaw the project for more than four years, Tony Metcalf, Metro's longest-running editor-in-chief, passed away this July from colon cancer. He was only 50 years old.

The toy drive, which is done in conjunction with Toys for Tots and the U.S. Marines, was by far Metcalf's favorite Metro initiative.

As a former co-worker put it, Metro Magic and the joy it brought to children made him "the happiest I've ever seen him ... even happier than he was at Yankee Stadium." (Boston and Philly readers, please don't hold that against him.)

Metro will continue the toy drive this year, but in honor of our beloved colleague, we're renaming it Tony's Metro Magic.

So starting today, and all through November and December both in print and online at www.metro.us, we will remind readers to donate — keep an eye out for the Tony's Metro Magic logo daily.

This season, we hope you will remember the children who will spend the holidays in shelters or who may not have gifts to open under the Christmas tree. One gift can make a big difference. METRO

How to take part

1 Look for the Tony's Metro Magic logo on our website, Metro.us.

2 One click on the logo will take you to a "Wish List" we have set up via a secure link on Toysrus.com.

3 Once there, you can see all the toys we've already requested for kids, and more are being added daily. Simply select the toys you want and purchase them. That's it! Selecting only the toys on our Wish List ensures that all the gifts will be shipped to our offices.

Tony's METRO MAGIC

Let us know!

If you donate, email Metro at charity@metro.us letting us know what you gave and we'll shout out a "thank you" in the paper.

Shop and give

What to contribute

Metro is collecting new, unwrapped gifts, not clothes. Things like action figures, dolls, board games and sports toys like a football are always good. And don't forget about older children, ages 11 and up. An older child would love to receive an MP3 player, a makeup kit or a poster from her favorite "Twilight" movie this year.

And you don't have to give much. Spending $10 or $20 on a toy or two can make a needy child's holiday wish come true.

Nabbed. Police catch man who attacked a Temple professor

Darryl Moon / PPD

About 12 hours after Philadelphia police identified Darryl Moon — a Philadelphia man with several other prior arrests — as the suspect in the attack of an 81-year-old Temple University professor, he was taken into custody Thursday.

Moon, 45, allegedly entered the professor's office at 1114 Polett Walk and punched the man in his face.

Police said Moon then put a knife to the professor's throat and demanded he hand over his wallet.

After Moon took the man's wallet, police said he struck the professor again, causing facial lacerations, swelling and bleeding to the man's brain.

The incident happened before noon on Oct. 29.

After police provided video surveillance showing the suspect, Moon was identified Wednesday as the suspect and taken into custody Thursday.

According to police, Moon has 16 prior arrests that include multiple robberies, assaults and thefts.

Reports show Moon in 2008 had served jail time on robbery charges. METRO

Watchdog group: Syria has destroyed weapon facilities

Chemical weapons. The country had until Nov. 1 to meet the deadline that was imposed.

Syria has destroyed or rendered inoperable all of its declared chemical weapons production and mixing facilities, meeting a major deadline in an ambitious disarmament program, the international chemical weapons watchdog said Thursday.

The Organization for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons, which won the Nobel Peace prize this month, said its teams had inspected 21 out of 23 chemical weapons sites across the country. The remaining two were too dangerous to reach for inspection but the chemical equipment had already been moved to other sites that experts had visited, it said.

Syria "has completed the functional destruction of critical equipment for all of its declared chemical weapons production facilities and mixing/filling plants, rendering them inoperable," it said, meeting a Nov. 1 deadline for the work.

"Most of the sites and facilities declared by Syria to the OPCW have been inspected, their inventories verified, equipment for chemical weapons production disabled and put beyond use, and some of the unfilled weapons have also been disabled," Ralf Trapp, an independent chemical weapons disarmament specialist, said.

Under a deal brokered by Russia and the United States, Damascus agreed to destroy all its chemical weapons after Washington threatened to use force in response to the killing of hundreds of people in a sarin attack on the outskirts of Damascus on Aug. 21.

HEALTH CARE'S DARK HEART

Like travelers huddling on the deck of a steamer amid the night sounds, plying an unmapped river in search of a madman's lair, the denizens of your nation's capital are exchanging horror stories.

Listen to any congressional hearing on Obamacare (and trust me, there are plenty to choose from) and you'll hear tales of families swept into the abyss of financial ruin by calamitous diseases, driven into the gaping maw of bankruptcy by government intrusion or dragged into the shrieking jungle by an insurance adjustor-turned-cannibal. Each story begins the same way: "Why, I've heard from a person who says ..." and then it veers off into whatever narrative best fits the politics of the speaker.

Sometimes the stories are backed up with letters, emails or even a congressional staffer who offers to put you in touch with the suffering soul at their center. Occasionally, these stories even prove to be true. But true or false, left or right, they all serve the same purpose: They hide the fact that hard numbers are sorely lacking on both sides of this debate.

Quoted

"Any good policy analyst will tell you to be wary of the horror stories on either side."

Think about it. If opponents of Obamacare had solid, undeniable numbers that proved the program would lead to disaster, don't you think we'd see those charts day after day, hour after hour? And if the White House was having unroarious success signing people into this program, don't you think we'd see a tote board emblazoned across the White House fairly shouting the impressive figures?

The thing is, Obamacare is so big, so earth-shaking in scope, and we are so early in the process of implementation, that no one seems to know precisely how it will play out. It's like approaching Kurtz's village — no one really knows what the future holds even if they are hoping for the best. But any good policy analyst will tell you to be wary of the horror stories on either side. The truth won't come in sentimental, partisan tales, but rather through hard numbers and real results. That's what will tell us if Obamacare is ultimately a work of genius or madness — or somewhere in between.

FAA to allow electronic devices

Airline passengers will soon be able to use electronic devices throughout their entire flight after the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration ended a long-standing ban on Thursday.

Mobile phone calls remain barred under Federal Communications Commission rules. But fliers will be free to keep smartphones, tablets and e-readers running in "airplane" mode.

Delta Air Lines and JetBlue quickly filed plans with the FAA to show that their aircraft can tolerate radio signals from electronic devices, a condition required by the regulator. The change is likely to boost the use of gadgets such as Amazon's Kindle or Apple's iPad. REUTERS

Fewer Americans are aware that violent crime has been on the rise in the United States for the past few years, according to a Gallup poll published on Thursday.

The poll, conducted early this month, found 64 percent of Americans feel crime is increasing, down from 68 percent in 2011. That decline came despite the fact violent crimes including rape, robbery and assault rose by more than one-third from 2010 to 2012, according to federal data. REUTERS

About the author

Douglas Coupland

Douglas Coupland is a Canadian novelist, visual artist and designer. His first novel, published in 1991, was "Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture." He has published 13 novels, a collection of short stories, seven nonfiction books and a number of dramatic works and screenplays for film and television. Douglas Coupland's novels and visual work synthesize high and low culture, Web technology, religion and changes in human existence caused by modern technologies.

'Alien eggs inside your brain'

See more at www.metro.us

Let's get started. Author Douglas Coupland, who invented the term "Generation X" with his debut 1991 novel, is publishing his new novella right here in Metro — starting Monday. He lets you know what to expect.

Introduction

A Metro first

We are pleased to announce our exclusive with author Douglas Coupland. His novella, "Temp," will run each weekday from Nov. 4 to Nov. 29. Charlotte Empey, the editor-in-chief of Metro Canada who arranged the collaboration, says that "Temp," "explores what it means to be young, smart and only temporarily employed, through the eyes of characters just trying to carve a place for themselves in an uncertain world."

When we reached out to the famed novelist about why he choose us, he said, "Metro is the drum beat of the global village. It reaches millions who devour every word and it all ends up being discussed in lunchrooms, meeting rooms and dinner tables."

In the next four weeks, you'll be reading the daily story of a very likeable character named Shannon. You already know Shannon — everyone knows Shannon. You may well be Shannon. She's that slightly geeky gal who temps at every office you've ever worked at. She's funny, she's got her head screwed on right and, most of all, Shannon lives in our collective real world. She lives in 2013, and her world is changing and mutating as rapidly as yours.

Change: that dreaded word. If only we could have a one-year holiday from change — but that's not going to happen and we know it. So then, how do we make the most of life as it's really lived? How do we cope and find the good stuff amid the bad stuff? That's what Shannon's all about.

But wait. Why Metro? And why me writing about a character named Shannon in Metro? There are two reasons. One, I always set my books in what I call "the extreme present tense." As living creatures, the present moment is all we have. It's freaky and messy and weird, but it's ours and soon enough the present tense will become the "good old days" — so enjoy it.

Check back on Monday for the first installment of "Temp," titled "Temp Enlivens Life-Sucking Meeting."

Two, I'm no longer sure if fiction is keeping pace with life and how we live it. I'm a born experimenter and I want to try something new to address this lack. I've said it before, and I'll say it again: As a species, we've never been smarter yet we've never felt stupider. We live in a world of devices and clouds and economic bubbles. A traditional novel will always be central to human civilization, but I get the impression a new form of storytelling is being called for. I call it dépêche fiction: fast-changing fiction. (Yes, kind of like Depeche Mode, a band I totally like.) Dépêche fiction is a cappuccino hit. Dépêche fiction is a really awesome Russian dash-cam clip. Dépêche fiction is written so that it accumulates in your brain over time, and then, just like alien eggs, it suddenly hatches and makes your brain say, "Hey! I'm feeling something tingly and new! And BTW, I've overtaken your existence!"

What to expect? Well, it's not "The Office," and it's not a comic strip. "Temp" is something new — and you get to be a part of the experiment. And Metro is the perfect slot for "Temp." Metro is read by people who are out there in the world living a full-on modern experience. Fiction is about readers being able to say, "Wait — that's how I see the world!" And I hope that's what you feel. And now let the eggs hatch.

HAILEE STEINFELD

For this actress, making "Ender's Game" was like training for battle.

GOING TO BOOT CAMP

Since getting Hollywood's attention — and an Oscar nomination — for "True Grit" in 2010, 16-year-old Hailee Steinfeld has kept some impressive momentum going. This fall, she debuted "Can a Song Save Your Life?" at the Toronto International Film Festival before seeing "Romeo and Juliet" hit theaters. Now she co-stars in the long-awaited film adaptation of the science-fiction novel "Ender's Game."

It's still early in your career, but you're making some great choices.
There's really been no specific method. I find that everything that I've done has been so different from the last, and I love that. But it's a process that involves my agents and my parents, so there's a lot of filtering before it gets to me.

With "Ender's Game," some viewers seem to be looking for a love story between yours and Asa Butterfield's characters. There isn't one.
They don't have to fall in love to trust each other. And they're in Battle School. People aren't secretly going out — there's none of that happening. There's no place to go, there's nothing to do, you're under strict rules and you're away from your family, so all you really want is a friend.

You make Battle School sound almost like a film set.
Yeah, totally! [Laughs] No, it's really interesting how that crossed over to our lives, being away from home and working however long each day. We were getting up at 7 a.m. for boot camp and all that stuff, but we had a really good time. It's funny, when we talk about it we make it sound like it was so grueling and horrible and hard, but it was one of the best experiences I've ever had. I walked away with some of the guys being among my best friends.

Hitting the shelves

You're also doing a lot of adaptations.

Yes! Which again is not necessarily intentional, but really helpful. I always find it interesting when some actors don't read the book [something is based on] — which is starting to make more sense to me given the fact that you're given a script to make a movie, and it may or may not have anything to do with the book. I remember when I shot "True Grit," the fact that it was a book and had been done before was huge for me and it helped me so much. And then with "Romeo and Juliet" and "Ender's Game," it's just a couple hundred extra pages of knowledge.

The faces of Karpovsky

Movies. Alex Karpovsky brings his film "Red Flag" to the Philadelphia Jewish Film Festival.

Alex Karpovsky stars in and made "Red Flag," playing at PJFF.

When not passing cynical judgment and living out of his Mitsubishi as Ray on Lena Dunham's "Girls," Alex Karpovsky is an independent filmmaker with five films to his directorial credit. His latest, "Red Flag," will screen on Wednesday as part of the Philadelphia Jewish Film Festival, which will present 18 films from 14 countries in a number of local venues over the next two weeks.

Karpovsky filmed "Red Flag," in which he stars as Alex Karpovsky, a director on a promotional tour for his film "Woodpecker" through Southern theaters. But the filmmaker cautions against confusing his onscreen and offscreen incarnations.

"I feel like it's not that autobiographical," the real Karpovsky says. "Though I have plenty of insecurities and neuroses, those are not necessarily the ones that I put in this movie. I've never been on a tour before, I've never had a groupie follow me that's turned into a really difficult, complicated love triangle, and I've never been engaged to a girl, so all that stuff is narrative creation."

The film was inspired by Karpovsky's apprehension over the prospect of a protracted solo road trip. "You have to travel five or six hours by yourself in a car, stay in low-end motels. The allure of the American highway has long since evaporated for me," he recalls. "I wasn't looking forward to it, to put it mildly."

While "Red Flag" doesn't have the overt Jewish themes of so many WWII dramas or thrillers about the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, Karpovsky says it still fits the festival's mission.

"My character is quite neurotic," he says. "He's quite self-reflective and insecure, and I think some of those elements are woven into the fabric of Jewish comedy — the neurotic, overanalytical person who's trying to figure out these crushing, overbearing existential issues that seem to paralyze his functionality. People like Woody Allen and Larry David come to mind, and I'm certainly a big fan of both of those Jewish guys."

Space movie. An adaptation keeps its sci-fi source's smarts.

Review

'Ender's Game'

Director: Gavin Hood

Stars: Asa Butterfield, Harrison Ford

Rating: PG-13

"Ender's Game" author Orson Scott Card has spent much of his life railing against homosexuality, and he was gung ho for the Iraq War. Yet Card's homophobia doesn't carry over to his most celebrated sci-fi novel, and it's at least skeptical of war, if not anti-war.

Set during a "Starship Troopers"-esque future, when mankind tussles with belligerent bug-like aliens, the plot asks hard questions about how inhumane military leaders must be to succeed while challenging war's effectiveness.

The movie stays close to its source: Ender ("Hugo"'s Asa Butterfield) is a robotically calm brainiac with a psychotic streak. This quality is noticed by the gruff Graff (Harrison Ford), a colonel who thinks Ender is "the one" who can be trained to defeat humanity's foe.

Where the book periodically wanders outside of the bubble that is Ender's training, the movie stays deep inside it. Like him, we never see the world he's defending, or the enemy he's being trained to obliterate.

Director Gavin Hood doesn't have much visual imagination. He steals the sleek, muted palettes from "Tron: Legacy." And yet there's a tight focus that's refreshing in our ADD-addled IMAX blockbuster landscape. The narrow storytelling also mirrors our hero's own predicament. He has blinders on, unaware of the bigger picture until it's too late.

More than just hot sex

Relationship saga. "Blue Is the Warmest Color" isn't always so scandalous.

SUNDANCE SELECTS

A pair of lengthy, graphic sex scenes have dominated press for "Blue Is the Warmest Color," even dwarfing the Palme d'Or and special award for its two lead actresses it won at Cannes.

Believe it or not, these bedroom bouts are necessary. The relationship between a bi-curious high schooler, Adele (Adele Exarchopoulos), and a blue-haired, 20-something painter, Emma (Lea Seydoux), is one that starts off defined by sex — and, for the former, the thrill of the very, very new. After some early hesitation, the two are making the beast with two backs for six minutes (not 10, as reported/wished for).

Because it's made by a man directing women touching each other in bathing suit areas, "Blue Is the Warmest Color"'s blue moments can't help but feel male gaze-y. But director Abdellatif Kechiche shoots the scenes the way he does the rest: with a mix of fascination and detachment. Kechiche comes from the school of handheld realism, where shaky cameras gravitate toward turmoil. But Kechiche is as fascinated by the mundane as the unbalanced. This may be the first awards-gobbling, brutally honest look at lovers that only features one knock-down, drag-out fight.

Kechiche's cameras keep roaming even after Adele moves in with Emma, at which point all the craziness disappears: the homophobia of peers, the need to hide the truth from parents and even, alas, the sex. All that's left are two people collapsing into domesticity, confronted with the possibility that they're not built to last. It's that rare film that acknowledges that a relationship that is once all-consuming can just lead to personal nonsense, diverging interests and, perhaps, that gutting moment when one accepts that the other has totally moved on.

A city's shame

MOVE members are forced out of their headquarters in 1978 in "Let the Fire Burn." / SAM PSORAS

Documentary.
"Let the Fire Burn" brings back the horrific 1985 MOVE bombing.

Apart from shining light on an unspeakably horrific event that has long loomed over Philadelphia, "Let the Fire Burn" — about the 1985 MOVE bombing that left 11 dead, including children, and reduced blocks to rubble — is an example of an expository documentary that thinks outside the box. Films like "Senna" and "Chicago 10" have struggled to get docs away from the mere "talking heads and archival footage" approach and closer to something that's more, for lack of a better word, "cinematic."

And "Let the Fire Burn" is incredibly cinematic. Where "Senna" kept the retrospective interviews but excluded the actual footage of the heads talking, Jason Osder's film loses even the interviews. Apart from the score and the very occasional basic intertitle to help us along, all we see and hear is footage from the day. We're immersed in the present of this world, and reminded of two things: MOVE (not an acronym, alas) were both once more of a hippie commune as well as a lot more of a nuisance than their martyr-like rep would have it.

Osder cleverly wraps this around the post-event hearings, when city officials tried to get a handle on how a forced eviction from MOVE's West Philly row home headquarters led to the breathtakingly thoughtless decision to drop a small bomb on their roof. MOVE's evolution from urban collective to something more dangerous — or was that just a misconception? — is something boring talking heads could make clearer. But those interested in learning more always have the Internet. "Let the Fire Burn" has something of equal value: The events themselves put vividly back into the present.

Old Oscar winners and Viagra jokes

Geriatric. A pile of legends take a nice vacation in the slovenly "Last Vegas."

Four acting greats take a timeout in "Last Vegas" for some much-needed scotch. / CHUCK ZLOTNICK

The four stars of "Last Vegas" — Michael Douglas, Robert De Niro, Morgan Freeman and Kevin Kline — have little left to prove, except that they can do a super-light, not very imaginative comedy that is fathoms beneath their talents. The quartet play lifelong friends at the bachelor party for Douglas, who's to marry a hottie a third his age.

What follows is four Oscar winners trotting out nonstop Viagra and Viagra-related jokes, while earning a well-deserved paid vacation, albeit to the second worst place in the Western world after Times Square. The loose and lived-in camaraderie between the leads — who've never worked together — helps, and while it's crap as comedy it's surprisingly trenchant as a look at the unflattering, under-discussed aspects of getting old.

Dismemberment Plan make 'Uncanney' return

Comeback. After more than 10 years without releasing an album, the Dismemberment Plan have returned.

The Dismemberment Plan are together once more. / PROVIDED

The Dismemberment Plan were a mainstay of the indie rock scene in the '90s and early '00s, but broke up in 2003. The members of the Plan have grown up a lot in the years since the breakup and their 2011 reunion: Eric Axelson has been teaching in public schools, singer Travis Morrison leads a start-up called Shoutabl and sings in church choirs, Jason Caddell has been working as a freelance audio engineer, and Joe Easley works at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center as an engineer. Now with "Uncanney Valley," their first album in 10 years, nothing stands between them.

"It's clear that we're friends for life," Morrison says, "but at this point if the four of us started fighting, that would be so weird. If we hated each other we'd have settled that a long time ago."

How has the band dynamic changed after all these years?

What I tell everyone is that in 1995, we were dating. We were a college romance that went on a six-year road trip, and when the road trip was over we had so many bags under our eyes. Now, I think it's much more like adults who come together who have other things going on.

What was the inspiration to produce an album this time?

We were playing different shows to promote a vinyl rerelease for "Emergency & I," and while we were practicing we started to get little jams and grooves, and after a while we were like, "Well, hey, when the shows are over, why don't we get together and keep jamming?"

You disbanded after the songs stopped exciting you. How did that dynamic change?

Different things have happened for all of us. There are so many personal things that it would be hard to trace why. How come this time when we got together in the basement, we started basement jamming? Maybe we had enough coffee?

‘More Than Just’ Tantrums

JEREMY RUZUMNA, SECOND FROM RIGHT, SAYS THAT MAKING “MORE THAN JUST A DREAM” WAS MORE THAN JUST A DREAM. PROVIDED

Music. Fitz and his band built their first album around a ’60s sound, but their new album is more about now.

When Fitz and the Tantrums began making the type of 1960s soul that rocketed them from buzzy opening act to headliners, they based their sound around an antique organ that Michael “Fitz” Fitzpatrick had found on the street. There’s no guitarist in the Tantrums, so the keys will always play an important role in defining the their sound, but to follow up their 2010 debut, “Pickin’ Up the Pieces,” they needed to diversify.

“For this album, we messed around with a vast collection of vintage keyboards,” says keys player Jeremy Ruzumna. “We’ve got some boards from the ’60s and ’70s and a lot of keyboards from the ’80s and ’90s, so it’s a whole smorgasbord of sounds.”

The result of this smorgasbord is “More Than Just a Dream,” which brings their retro sound into the future, touching upon 1980s new wave and even indie rock. Working with producer Tony Hoffer (M83, Phoenix, Beck), the sound may have changed, but the tunes still beckon listeners to the dance floor.

“We knew we didn’t want to make ‘Pickin’ Up the Pieces’ part two,” Ruzumna says. “With this one we decided, let’s just try everything. Seriously, anything goes.”

Ruzumna says the pressure to do something different didn’t bother him. The band thrives on this sort of challenge.

“I think whenever you make a second record there’s much more scrutiny going on,” he says, “but it’s also exhilarating and it kind of pushes you and drives you to make each note or song or lyric as great as you possibly can make it.”

Clooney puts rumors to rest

George Clooney isn't the lady-killer the press is making him out to be, he insists. He's been linked recently to Katie Holmes, model Monika Jakisic and attorney Amal Alamuddin, but insists he's been going home alone. "Three different stories in three weeks. I should be an athlete," he jokes to People magazine.

After they canceled "Judge Joe Brown," I thought I'd never watch morning TV again. That is, until Halloween, when the various morning talk show crews dress up like the serious journalists they are.

On "Today," Al Roker rocked Mr. T while Kathie Lee and Hoda went as Betty Rubble and Wilma Flintstone. But it was Matt Lauer who really outdid himself as Pamela Anderson in "Baywatch." Is it strange that he looks actually kind of attractive? Luckily, Carmen Electra was also there in her famed one-piece to help cleanse viewers' eyeballs.

"This year I decided to go as something really scary: half naked," Ellen DeGeneres told viewers in her Nicki Minaj getup. Over at "LIVE with Kelly and Michael," Kelly Ripa and Michael Strahan fell for the "Miley Cyrus and Robin Thicke" cliche. You can do better, guys!

Not everyone has 20 percent ready to go

Re: 'Expert tips for new homebuyers' (Metro, Oct. 16) Gary Malin appears to be talking to the wealthy only. Those tips are for the homebuyers who have the 20 percent or more to put down on a home.

This expert's advice is missing what happens when you do not have 20 percent down and you are charged with a PMI fee, there can be a couple hundred dollars or more added to your mortgage for years.

Try and re-mortgage at a lower rate. It starts all over again. The mortgage company or banks — and whatever else — are making millions from homeowners. You cannot even get the PMI charge canceled if you NEVER miss a payment on your mortgage. They can dismiss this charge if they want, but won't. LORRAINE MORSE, VIA EMAIL

In Foles we trust

Foles ready to 'let it rip'

Nick Foles will make his first start since that debacle against Dallas. The key? Foles said to simply trust his instincts and throw the ball. Basically, simplify the game, instead of over-thinking it. "Just rip it," Foles said. "Just throw it how you know, don't hold anything back, really follow through. I know how to throw a football."

Terrelle Pryor broke off a 93-yard run last week, the longest for a quarterback in NFL history. / GETTY IMAGES

3 things to watch

1 Triple threat
Terrelle Pryor is a dual-threat with his feet and arm, but he's not the only hybrid-type player on the roster. Starting tailback Darren McFadden can also beat teams with his legs and arm. McFadden threw seven touchdowns in three years at Arkansas, and threw one in Week 3 against Denver.

2 Shady records
LeSean McCoy, who leads the NFL in rushing (733), hasn't had a 100-yard game since Oct. 13. As much as the Eagles deny it, the lack of a read-option threat at quarterback is hurting the running game. Nick Foles has to at least try and pull it down once in a while to keep the defense honest.

3 Digging out of the Hole
The Eagles will be making just their third trip to Oakland's infamous "Black Hole" — unless you count a trip to Los Angeles. The Eagles are 0-for-2 in Oakland, losing in 1995 and 2009.

Imagining Pryor in Kelly's offense

NFL. Raiders QB Terrelle Pryor has the size, arm and legs to work magic in Chip Kelly's offense.

Imagine Terrelle Pryor running the Eagles' offense under Chip Kelly. He has the speed of a young Mike Vick, combined with the size of an NBA power forward and a rocket arm.

Keep dreaming, because Pryor has emerged as the Raiders' starter, potentially a franchise-changing player. But there was a day when Kelly imagined Pryor running his offense. Kelly tried to recruit him at Oregon and flew out to Pryor's high school to watch him play.

"I think the first thing that will strike you when you see him is just actually how big he is," said Kelly, who compared him to Cam Newton. "When you see him, you look like you're looking at a defensive end."

But don't let Pryor's measurements fool you. He is as quick as they come, as evidenced by his 93-yard run last week, the longest run for a quarterback in NFL history.

"I think the one threat he's always had is his ability to kind of take the ball, and tuck it and run," Kelly said. "When he escapes, it might not be a 6-yard gain; it could be a 60-yard gain with the type of wheels he has."

The Eagles aren't giving away their game plan. However, linebacker Mychal Kendricks promised the team has prepared for "everything."

"He's a fast guy, good quarterback, and I'm looking forward to it," Kendricks said.

It's a chance to stop, smell the roses and look back at what has happened. Some midway awards:

Michael Jordan Memorial Award (MVP). It's really hard for a quarterback to be fantasy's most valuable player, but Peyton Manning has been completely absurd.

He has 49 more fantasy points than any other QB. He has more fantasy points than Tom Brady and Robert Griffin III combined. He's on pace to shatter Drew Brees' single-season record for passing yards and is averaging 3.6 touchdown passes per game.

If you own Manning and aren't at least 6-2, you should consider submitting fantasy retirement papers.

Victor Cruz Memorial Award (Waiver Add). In the offseason and training camp, it looked like a two-headed battle between Montee Ball and Ronnie Hillman for the Broncos' starting job.

But on the Sunday morning of Week 1, word leaked out that Knowshon Moreno came out of nowhere and would start. Owners that were on that news and scooped him up have fantasy's No. 2 back and a guy on pace for 19 touchdowns. Early bird gets the worm again.

Trent Richardson has been a colossal bust since being traded to the Colts. / GETTY IMAGES

Ryan Mathews Memorial Award (Bust). There are a ton of candidates this year as more first- and second-round running backs than usual have choked.

C.J. Spiller has been a bust (although he makes a great buy low), David Wilson was brutal before going down and Doug Martin was atrocious prior to his labrum tear.

But, the award goes to Trent Richardson because he's been fully healthy and hasn't performed. In fact, he's gotten outplayed by Donald Brown since he got traded to the Colts. That's humiliating.

NFL news

Starting in place of injured Rashard Mendenhall (toe) last week, Andre Ellington broke off 154 yards and a touchdown on 15 carries. That wasn't a surprise to any fantasy owner. But it did apparently surprise the Cardinals coaches, as they now say they want to get Ellington a similar amount of touches even when Mendy gets back. The fourth-round rookie is a Top-25 running back going forward.

NFL pickups

Keep these names in mind if you are looking to tweak your fantasy football roster.

- Jake Locker, QB, Titans — Combine rapidly improving play, athletic legs and a cake schedule to get a solid top-15 QB the rest of the way.
- Tim Wright, TE, Bucs — Mike Williams' season-ending hamstring will open more looks for this converted Rutgers wide receiver.
- Andre Brown, RB, Giants — David Wilson (neck) might be done and Brandon Jacobs and Peyton Hillis can't move. Brown will be back in Week 10.

Match game

Start these borderline wideouts this week.

- Terrance Williams, Cowboys — Improving with each game, Williams has left Miles Austin in the dust.
- Steve Smith, Panthers — Cam Newton is hot and everyone shreds the Falcons atrocious defense. Plus, Smith is due for a breakout game.
- Kendall Wright, Titans — Wright has at least five catches and 54 yards in six straight games. Now he gets the Rams.

Rookie of the Year? MCW has big game

NBA. Michael Carter-Williams is making believers out of NBA legend after one game.

If the Sixers want to tank the season, they might have a problem.

Apparently, that memo — the one on official team letterhead — never reached Michael Carter-Williams. The rookie out of Syracuse was electrifying in his debut Wednesday and helped lead a 114-110 upset over Miami.

Carter-Williams, who scored in the first 23 seconds on a steal and two-handed dunk, finished with 22 points, 12 assists, seven rebounds and nine steals. After the game, Magic Johnson wrote, via Twitter, that Carter-Williams would be Rookie of the Year.

"I have a lot of respect for Magic and what he did for the game," the rookie said. "You look up to guys like him." METRO

Niners bring back Smith

The 49ers activated Aldon Smith from the nonfootball injury list Thursday.

The linebacker was released from an alcohol treatment center earlier this week. San Francisco has a bye this week, but the team expects him to play Nov. 10 vs. Arizona. Smith has 4 1/2 sacks. METRO

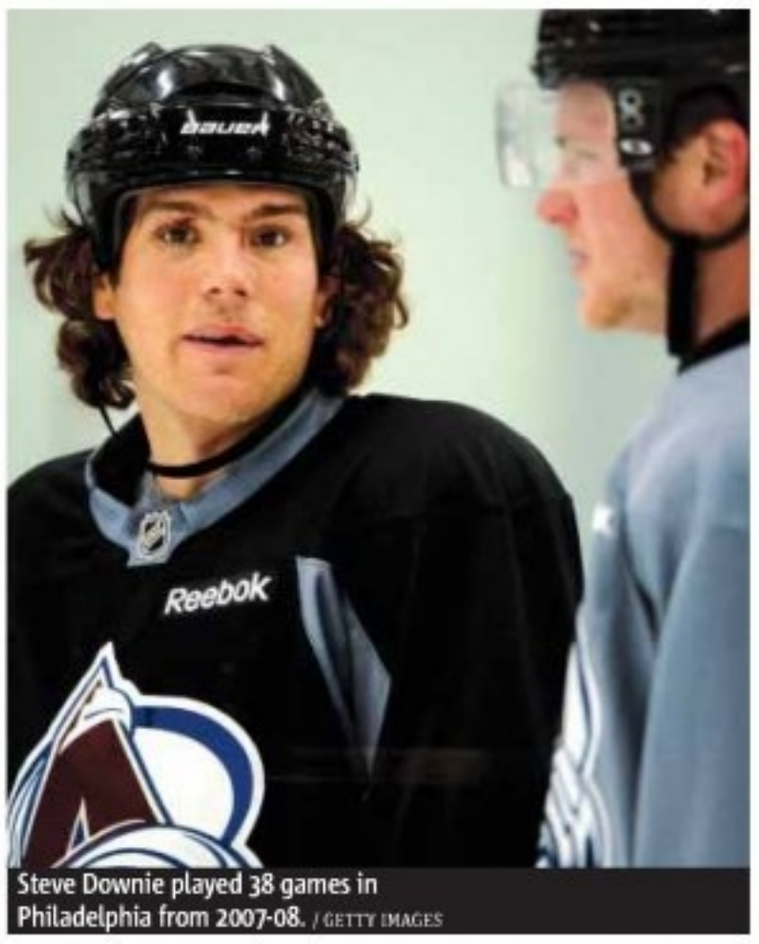
'Frequent Flyer' back, Talbot sent packing

NHL. Flyers trade gritty checking center Max Talbot for Steve Downie's scoring punch.



Steve Downie played 38 games in Philadelphia from 2007-08. / GETTY IMAGES

Only a week ago Max Talbot crashed headfirst into the boards, courtesy of the Rangers' Benoit Pouliot, and had to be helped off the ice, his face bloodied.

Incredibly, he returned to action a period later, drawing admiration for being the kind of quintessential gutty player that often makes a team tick.

Now, he's on his way to the Avalanche. The Flyers traded him for 26-year-old Steve Downie, a more offensive-minded left winger. And yes, that makes Downie the latest "frequent Flyer," having played 38 games here from 2007-08.

Desperate for scoring punch, GM Paul Holmgren is hoping Downie — a goal and six assists in 11 games for the Avalanche — will provide that. Talbot, despite being a terrific penalty-killer and solid-checking center, had just a goal and an assist after scoring 19 goals in 2012.

"I like the hunger and energy he brings," said Holmgren. "He's a guy who goes to the front of the net with a purpose and is strong with the puck and can make plays. Steve's a good player, a better player than maybe people give him credit for. We didn't want to trade him five years ago, but we needed a defenseman at the time."

The other thing the deal might do is jolt some of his struggling young players, making them realize they could be next. While captain Claude Giroux still hasn't scored a goal, he's not going anywhere. The same might not hold for Sean Couturier (no goals, two assists), Brayden Schenn (two goals, four assists), Jake Voracek (one goal, three assists).

"We continue to look around, just like every team," said Holmgren. "We want to get this turned around here. If something makes us better, we'll look at it."

The coming month — at least in theory — should give the Flyers (3-8) a chance to make up some ground, since they play only three teams currently sporting winning records. Then again, only six of 16 teams in the East have winning records, opposed to 10 of 14 in the West, which has dominated head-to-head play, 54-23-8, through Wednesday.

The slate

Flyers have back-to-back games this weekend.

- Friday, Capitals at Flyers, 7 p.m. (CSN)
- Saturday, Flyers at Devils, 7 p.m. (TCN)

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

PUBLISHERS NOTE
All real estate advertising herein is subject to the Federal Fair Housing Act of 1968 and state and local fair housing laws. The Fair Housing Act makes it legal to advertise any preference, limitations or discrimination on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, handicap, familial status, or national origin or an intention to make any such preference, limitation or discrimination. State or local laws may make unlawful advertising that discriminates on the basis of age, marital status, or sexual orientation. Metro US will not knowingly accept any advertising for real estate which violates the law. The law requires that all dwellings advertised are available on an equal opportunity basis. If you have any questions regarding housing discrimination, call the Long Island Housing Services at 1(800) 660-6920 in Long Island or the Anti-Discrimination Center at (212) 346-7600 in New York City. To file a complaint call HUD toll-free at (800) 669-9777 or the New York City Commission on Human Rights at (212) 306-7500
